Guerrillas Say Jordan Launches All-out Attack

BEIRUT, Jan. 8 (NYT)—The Jordanian Army today launched an all-out sweep against Palestinian guerrillas in a large area north of Amman, shelling their bases, arresting individuals and confiscating their weapons, according to Palestinian communiques.

If the claim is true, the development constitutes the sharpest confrontation between the guerrillas and the regime of King Hussein since the civil war last September. The new clashes took place only 24 hours after Bahi Ladgham, the head of the Arab follow-up committee, left Amman for Cairo to report to Egyptian President Anwar Sadat on the spreading situation.

Bomb Blasts Russian Center In Washington; No One Hurt

Anonymous Caller Warns Of New Raids

By Robert F. Levey

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8 (WP)—A small bomb shattered windows and blew a rear door 200 feet early this morning at a four-story Russian-owned building in downtown Washington.

SHATTERED—The Soviet diplomatic mission's cultural building in Washington, where a bomb exploded yesterday, damaging a rear steel door and breaking windows.

"I'm only going to repeat this message once so take it down. The Soviet Cultural Building on 18th Street has been bombed. This is a sample of things to come. Let our people go! Never again!"

League's Slogan

"Never again" is the slogan of the Jewish Defense League, a militant New York-based group which has claimed credit for recent anti-Soviet acts of violence there and elsewhere in the United States.

The police department which was in charge of the investigation, said that there had been no arrests by late today.

The explosion brought a protest from Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko and apologies from both the U.S. ambassador in Moscow and the State Department here.

Jewish groups throughout the United States condemned the bombing as pointless and probably harmful to the 2.5 million Jews living in the Soviet Union.

Earl R. Drescher, a deputy chief of the Executive Protection Service, the uniformed branch of the U.S. Secret Service, said at the scene that the "explosion was apparently caused by a lead-pipe type bomb left against the rear door," which opened onto an alley.

The door, a solid sheet of thin metal weighing about 50 pounds, was blown onto the roof of an adjoining apartment building by the explosion. In all, at least 20 windows in four adjoining buildings were shattered. The most windows—eight—were broken at the headquarters of the American Psychiatric Association next door.

Although the cultural center is owned by the Soviet Embassy, no Executive Protection Service sentry is assigned to guard it.

"The center is in the area of our patrols," a Secret Service spokesman said, "but there were no units in the area at the time of the explosion."

The SES has increased patrols at the Soviet Embassy and the five other buildings the embassy leases or owns in Washington, the spokesman said.

William A. Wexler, international president of B'nai B'rith, called the bombing "a reprehensible act of terrorism that can only exacerbate the plight of Soviet Jews."

Grand Chaplain of the American Jewish Committee, said that an "attack in the night against defenseless people is a cowardly, cowardly act... I would defend to the death the defenseless persons in the Russian Embassy or any embassy."

Gromyko Protests Bombing in U.S.; Pan Am Agent Accosted in Moscow

By Bernard Gwertzman

MOSCOW, Jan. 8 (NYT)—Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko today delivered "a stern protest" to U.S. Ambassador Jacob D. Beam over the bomb blast at a Soviet cultural building in Washington this morning.

American Embassy sources said that Mr. Gromyko rebuked the U.S. government for failing to end the harassment of Soviet establishments and personnel.

He hinted, the sources said, that Soviet retaliation against Americans stationed here might escalate.

Mr. Gromyko was reported to have said that if the Soviet people get worked up over the incidents, it will be difficult for authorities to contain them. So far, anti-American actions here have been quite restrained.

The meeting, which was largely devoted to a discussion of the harassment of Soviet representatives in America by militant Jewish groups, lasted about an hour, embassy sources said.

They said that Mr. Gromyko indicated, disbelieving that the U.S. government was not able to stop the anti-Soviet incidents. Some Americans believe that Moscow—which never permits spontaneous demonstrations—simply finds it hard to believe that the United States is not behind the "Zionist extremists."

The Soviet government threatened, in a note delivered in Washington on Monday, to retaliate against Americans here since the United States had not taken steps to insure normal working conditions for Soviet diplomats and other representatives in the United States.

Since then, Soviet authorities have maintained psychological pressure on Americans here, but have carefully not let it reach serious proportions, although Americans here do not believe the worst is over yet.

Today, five more delegations, representing various Moscow institutions, including the Academy of Sciences and the Philharmonia Society, visited the embassy to deliver protest petitions.

Last night, four Russian men accused Ernest Corning, representative there for Pan American Airways, as he was walking to his car near the Hotel Metropole, where he has his office.

"They gave me a 15-minute lecture on incidents in the United States which prevented Soviet citizens from carrying out their work there," he said.

"They asked me what my reaction would be if they were to beat me up. I said that I didn't know, because I don't," he added.

The American community of about 300 is beginning to show some anxiety. Several wives have asked if it is safe for them to go on the streets. The answer is "yes."

The embassy weekly news bulletin said today that "everyone is advised to keep a two-kopek piece on their person" for pay phones. "You never know when it might be necessary," it added.

Uruguay's Rebel Tupamaros Kidnap British Ambassador

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Jan. 8 (UPI)—Leftist Tupamaro terrorists kidnaped British Ambassador Geoffrey Jackson today on his way to work in a sensational commando operation in which they hid a submachine gun in a basket of lettuce.

A group of Tupamaros in a stolen car pulled up in front of the ambassador's black Daimler in a narrow street of the Old City, seven blocks from the heavily guarded British Embassy, while a "fruit vendor" in the street produced the submachine gun from his basket.

They dragged the ambassador's chauffeur from his car and used clubs to beat into submission the two bodyguards who were following in a small truck. Then, witnesses said, they drove the ambassador away in his own car with the stolen vehicle following.

Police estimated at least ten persons took part in the kidnapping. A spokesman said an empty vial was found in the ambassador's automobile, indicating the kidnappers may have injected Mr. Jackson with a drug.

The ambassador's car was found damaged a mile and a half from the scene. Witnesses there said they saw a man being transferred into a white car, which took off at high speed toward the outskirts of the capital.

Mr. Jackson, 55, has been ambassador to Uruguay since July, 1969, and has held several other diplomatic posts in Latin America, the Middle East and Europe. Ironically, he is an old friend of British Trade Commissioner James R. Cross, recently released by terrorists in Quebec.

Police immediately launched a widespread search, stopping all cars leaving and entering the capital. But the same group has been holding two other foreign officials for months while police have searched in vain.

Long-Haired Russians Get a Tepid 'Defender'

None Other Than No. 2 Policeman

MOSCOW, Jan. 8 (NYT)—Shaggy-haired Soviet youths who have been struggling to keep their hair long despite angry stares, hostile school officials and puzzled parents, have won a concession from the country's No. 2 law-enforcement official. No matter how awful they may look, he said, they should not be arrested.

A letter printed in this week's issue of Literaturnaya Gazeta by Mikhail P. Mal'yarov, first deputy procurator-general, was a reply to a complaint voiced by a girl who reported that her boyfriend, a hard-working, sober 24-year-old, had been seized on the street simply because his hair had looked suspicious to authorities.

As he was waiting for a bus, she said, two "bummer policemen, known as 'drubhini,'" took him to their headquarters and tried to make him consent to having his hair cut. When he refused, she said, they turned him over to the regular police who grilled him for several hours before letting him go free.

The girl asked that neither her name nor that of her boyfriend be printed, and the city, in which the incident happened was not disclosed. The rising popularity of long hair among youth and the lack of tolerance toward the phenomenon by much of the older population have become lively topics of conversation here. But they have not been discussed much in the press.

Long-haired young men, often carrying guitars, are not an uncommon sight these days, but older people tend to regard them as "uncultured" just as they frowned upon such Western "imports" as the twist and the miniskirt when they made their appearance here. Schoolteachers have been reported to be particularly unhappy with the new hair styles. The press has reported cases of youths being sent home because of the length of their hair.

Russia Urged at SALT Talks Limited Accord to Bar ABMs

By Chalmers M. Roberts

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8 (WP)—The Soviet Union has proposed a limited, first-step strategic arms agreement that would bar rival anti-missile (ABM) systems other than for the protection of Washington and Moscow.

This would leave to later an agreement on limiting rival land and sea-based missiles. The Soviet proposal came toward the end of the third round of the SALT talks, which wound up in Helsinki last Dec. 18, 30 has now been learned.

But the Nixon administration opposes an ABM-only agreement despite the fact that the United States is under former President Lyndon B. Johnson, originally sought the SALT talks in order to curb ABMs. It was the Soviet Union that insisted on including offensive nuclear weapons as well as defensive systems before Moscow would agree to SALT.

The reversal of position on Moscow's part came about this way: During the Helsinki round, from Nov. 2 to Dec. 18, the Soviet delegation placed major emphasis on a demand that in any overall agreement covering both offensive and defensive weapons, the United States must include its aircraft in Western Europe and aboard carriers in both the Atlantic-Mediterranean area and in the Pacific, since such planes can deliver nuclear weapons to Soviet soil.

But the American delegation was under presidential instruction to defend the end of the third round of the SALT talks, which wound up in Helsinki last Dec. 18, 30 has now been learned.

1,000 Passengers Abandon Cruise Ship Off Puerto Rico

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico, Jan. 8 (Reuters)—The French cruise liner Andilia, with approximately 1,000 passengers aboard, ran aground and caught fire about 450 miles southeast of San Juan tonight, the U.S. Coast Guard reported.

The Coast Guard said all the passengers had abandoned the liner and were safe in lifeboats when the ship went aground about half a mile north of the island of Mistique in the Cienfuegos.

The British luxury liner Queen Elizabeth-2 was reported in the area and was racing to the scene. About 16 aircraft were sent out to the area to drop life rafts and U.S. Navy helicopters were on their way to provide any assistance needed.

Ruled 'Risk' to U.K.

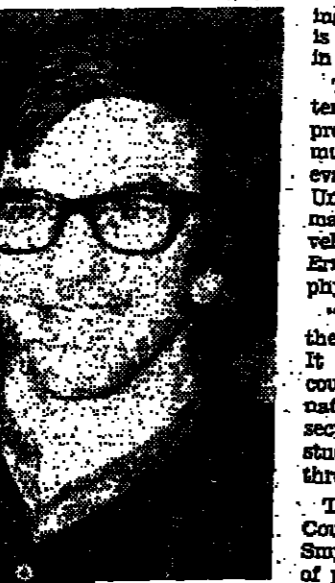

By Anthony Lewis

LONDON, Jan. 8 (NYT)—In a decision with profound implications for British law and the tradition of asylum, Lord Dutschke was told today that he was not welcome in a country.

A special immigration tribunal ruled that Mr. Dutschke, the former German radical student leader, would be a security risk if stayed. The tribunal sustained the deportation order issued by the executive government.

The tribunal found that Mr. Dutschke's presence here had not constituted any appreciable danger to national security. But it stated, "there must without delay be a decision on whether to raise a lasting controversy about how this country should deal with such a case."

Historically, Britain has been notably open as a place of asylum for political refugees—not excluding ing radicals. The archetypal case is that of Karl Marx, working away in the British Museum.

Two German professors who introduced here for Mr. Dutschke expressed shock at the decision. Helmut Gollwitzer, professor of evangelical theology at the Free University, West Berlin, said it made him anxious about the development of democracy in Britain.

Ernst Bloch, professor of philosophy at Tübingen University, said: "It just isn't fair—we even use the English word 'fair' in Germany. It is absolutely ridiculous that he could represent a danger to British national security. Is British security so insecure that a little student from Germany can threaten it?"

The secretary of the National Council for Civil Liberties, Tony Smythe, said today that "the virus of political intolerance has arrived in Britain." He added: "I don't believe the institutions and traditions of this country are so weak that they cannot withstand the presence of one sick man and his ideas."

Mr. Dutschke said through his lawyers that it "should now be possible to raise a lasting controversy about how this country should deal with such a case."

Broad Reform of U.S. Laws Urged in Report to Congress

By Fred P. Graham

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8 (NYT)—The National Commission on Reform of Federal Criminal Laws submitted its final report to the President and Congress yesterday, recommending that capital punishment be abolished, that marijuana possession be made punishable only by fines and that private ownership of hand-guns be outlawed.

The 12-member group also concluded that laws against the sale or transportation of obscene matter should be retained. It considered but rejected the recent report of a Presidential Commission on Pornography, which advised that all laws against the sale of pornography to willing adults should be repealed.

Pravda Rebukes Soviet Jews Who Try to Migrate to Israel

MOSCOW, Jan. 8 (NYT)—Pravda, the Communist party paper, asserted today that Soviet Jews have equal rights and opportunities in Soviet society and charged that those seeking their emigration to Israel are enemies of the Soviet Union.

A theoretical article, entitled "Soviet Socialism Patriotism," also accused Western propaganda of defending "criminal elements who have abandoned in court for activities against the Soviet state." This was an apparent reference to Western concern for the 11 defendants—nine of them Jews—tried recently in Leningrad on charges of plotting to hijack an airliner and fly to Israel.

Affirming the Kremlin's lack of tolerance toward dissidents, Pravda said the West "shamelessly praises as 'heroes' contemptible traitors who shelter under the wing of imperialist intelligence services and make their living by providing disgusting writings about our country."

The article was sweeping in its attacks. It rebuked Communist China's "great-power chauvinism," assailed those who agitate for increased "local nationalism" in the Soviet Union, and denied that any Jewish problem exists in the Soviet Union.

It was one in a continuing series of toughly worded articles indicating that, as the Soviet Communist party nears its 24th party congress on March 30, no change is contemplated in its basically conservative approach to ideological problems. The Kremlin's view is considered the only correct one, whether within the Soviet Union or in the Communist movement as a whole.

The article also underscored that at least for the moment the Soviet Union is adhering to its position that Russian Jews have no need to emigrate to Israel, since their "homeland" is in Russia.

"The campaign launched by the forces of world imperialism and Zionism for the emigration of Soviet citizens of Jewish nationality to Israel shows the viciousness of the methods to which our adversaries have recourse in order to discredit the land of the Soviets and undermine the class nature of socialist patriotism," it said.

"It is common knowledge that these citizens were born, grew up and were educated in the Soviet Union," it continued. Pravda said Soviet Jews have "wide rights and opportunities equal to all members of Soviet society—to engage in socially useful activities."

"But imperialist propaganda persistently alleges that their homeland is Israel," Pravda said, "and that all the Jews are allegedly united with unbreakable ties. But it is quite obvious that the interests of Jewish working people, citizens of whatever country they may be, are opposite to the interests of Jewish financial magnates, bankers and industrialists, wherever they may live."

The theme of the Pravda comments on Jews was that any Jew who seeks to emigrate to Israel is supporting "world imperialism and Zionism" in their anti-Soviet activity, and if a Jew signs petitions that make their way to the West, he can be classed as a traitor.

Heath Meets With Yahya In Pakistan More Students Riot Over Book on Prophet

RAWALPINDI, Pakistan, Jan. 8 (UPI)—President Yahya Khan tonight told British Prime Minister Edward Heath that Pakistan believes the British Commonwealth "use force" and said he hopes the global association will show the resilience to survive that it has in the past.

Mr. Heath arrived earlier today in the world's largest Moslem nation, currently being shaken by widespread anti-British riots, on his way to meet with Commonwealth prime ministers' conference in Singapore. There, he is expected to face a showdown over his government's proposal to sell arms to the apartheid government of South Africa.

Mr. Yahya, who said preoccupations at home will prevent him from attending the conference on Jan. 14-22, made no direct reference to proposed weapons sales but said the Commonwealth's "evolution has been dictated by the needs of the time."

The British prime minister's arrival was quiet and there were no signs of the massive demonstration occurring in other cities of the nation, which was part of British India until 1947. Some British government buildings have been attacked in Karachi, Lahore and other centers by Moslem students protesting the publication in Britain of an illustrated book, "The Art of Love in Pictures," which makes references to the alleged sex life of the Prophet Mohammed.

Mr. Yahya, head of the military government which has ruled Pakistan for the last 22 months, tonight was host at a banquet for Mr. Heath.

"Our two countries also share a conviction about the utility of the Commonwealth link," he said in a speech.

SINGAPORE, Jan. 8 (Reuters)—A wide range of agreement on the future defense of the Singapore-Malaysia area was reached in five-power talks which ended here tonight, conference sources said.

A joint communiqué issued after the two-day talks, held between Britain, Australia, New Zealand, Malaysia and Singapore, said a document was drawn up setting out the political framework for area defense arrangements after the Anglo-Malaysian defense agreement expires this year.

The decision taken during the talks between mid-level defense officials will be submitted for final agreement to a full ministerial conference in London early this year.

L'Express Staff Protests Servan Ties A Newsmagazine Vs. Its Founder

PARIS, Jan. 8.—A rebellion of newsmen at L'Express, France's leading newsmagazine, against Jean-Jacques Servan-Schreiber, its former publisher, appears to have been headed off by the magazine's agreement to publish a statement by newsmen in next week's edition.

The newsmen protest that Mr. Servan-Schreiber, who is now a French deputy and chairman of the Radical party, has entered into an arrangement with the magazine's management that can only "damage the image of a newsmagazine." They point out they were not consulted on the agreement and are not bound by it.

The new difficulties arose as Mr. Servan-Schreiber, 46, and his brother, Jean-Louis Servan-Schreiber, 33, head of L'Expansion, a business monthly, both announced their resignation from the Express Group. Jean-Louis, who is not in politics, reportedly resigned after disagreeing with his older brother on the mixture of politics and magazines.

The newsmen's protest arose when they learned that, despite resignation from Groupe Express, he would stay on to contribute columns of his "personal opinion."

In a statement they indicate: ● They were not consulted on the new arrangement and are not bound by it.

● They "judge that a frequent and exclusive collaboration of any politician can only damage the image of a newsmagazine."

● They "take note of assurances given by management and by the editors against any political interference."

● They are nonetheless asking that a commission of three newsmen be elected to "watch over the independence of the magazine and its newsmen."

L'Express, which has a weekly circulation of about 600,000, has had a crise de conscience ever since its publisher and founder launched his political career a year ago. At the time, he resigned as publisher, but stayed on as president of the group and on the magazine's steering committee. He has also contributed columns from time to time.

At the heart of the matter is L'Express' attempt since Mr. Servan-Schreiber founded it in 1953 to be an "objective" newsmagazine rather than the more traditional French journal engaged editorially, however, it has supported French center-left politics.

Because Mr. Servan-Schreiber's platform as Radical party leader is also center-left, a confusion planned for Monday's edition, both the collective group that now runs the magazine and Mr. Servan-Schreiber give assurances to readers that the independence of the magazine will not be affected. The management points out that it, not Mr. Servan-Schreiber, is responsible for L'Express and its independence and that the relationship between the two will be limited to Mr. Servan-Schreiber's opinion columns and his "professional advice in matters of direction and development."

In his response, Mr. Servan-Schreiber thanked the management of the magazine, of which he is still majority stockholder, for giving him a contract to offer his opinion. Then he asks rhetorically: "Would a complete break have been better, would it have been more rewarding? We both thought differently. And it is without doubt the nature of our era that obliges us to find new solutions."

between the party's views and the magazine's views would be unavoidable. In the page of explanations...

U.S. Airman Sure He Bombed The Bridge on the River Kwai

BANGKOK, Jan. 8 (UPI)—Despite the book and movie, Lt. Col. William A. Henderson is convinced that he blew up the bridge on the River Kwai.

"I hit the bridge with the first," he said. "I watched it [the bomb] all the way down. I knew it was a good one."

Col. Henderson asked his pilot to continue on course for some photographs. "The delay was a mistake," he said. "Just as we were turning, anti-aircraft fire hit us."

"It was a frightening moment," Col. Henderson said. "I thought we would have to bail out right then and there."

But the plane made it back to friendly territory and crashed-landed on a beach near Pandaveswar. None of the ten crewmen was injured.

Col. Henderson has just returned from the site of the bridge at Kanchanaburi in central Thailand and has had a meeting with Boonpong Sirivejjanand, the former mayor of Kanchanaburi who is now a Bangkok businessman.

"It was my conversation with Boonpong that convinced me I blew up the bridge on the River Kwai," he said.

The Latest Paris Fad: Shorts in Mid-Winter

By Hebe Dorsey

PARIS, Jan. 8.—Fashions and logic rarely go together. In subfreezing weather, the latest Paris fad is short shorts.

Stockings, tall boots, leotards or a brand new boot-and-tights combination that has just been conveniently put on the market.

MEN IN SHORTS—At the reopening of La Cintra, Thursday, the women were upstaged by designer Loris Azzaro, left, and his assistant Reinhard Luthe, right.

Although many predict that shorts will be short-lived, right now they're everywhere. In New York, where designer Adolfo is showing crepe de chine pants; in London, where the accolade comes from mini-skirt champion Mary Quant; and in Italy where the main trend in the recent Florence showings was shorts.

'AAARGH'—The Character of the Comics

By Max Wykes-Joyce

LONDON, Jan. 8.—Under the inarticulate title-cry of "AAARGH!" many favorite comic characters—Peanuts, B.C., L'il Abner, Buz Sawyer, Wizard of Id, Rip Kirby and Blondie—have all arrived at the Institute of Contemporary Arts, Nash House, The Mall, in a sparkling compilation, a celebration of comics, organized by Michael Kustow.

Blondie, Dagwood and Daisy—all present at new London show.

The several hundred items are divided into six units of which "Comics U.S.A." is the first; and in which are included other old favorites and prototypes such as the Katzenjammer Kids, Krazy Kat, Gasoline Alley, Tarzan, Flash Gordon and Dick Tracy.

At the Sigi Kraus Gallery, 29 Neal Street, W.C.2. are two Romanians, Hortia Bernea and Paul Neagu, neither of whom would seem short on ideas.

eye is fatigued, perverted, shallow, its culture is degenerate, degraded and superannuated, accused by photography, films, television.

The unit "Space Time & Comics" examines in some depth the visual and narrative techniques of comic production; reinforced by the units entitled "Comic Stripworld" and "Works by Artists."

Wine: An Annual Trophy

By Jon Winroth

PARIS, Jan. 8.—Clank up one more for youth and Auvergne when it comes to good wine. This afternoon the annual Prix du Meilleur Pot de Paris went to 35-year-old Auvergnat Guy Jarriges, his elegant Le Sauceron at 12 Rue du Champ de Mars.

These are basically for the restaurant part of Le Sauceron where cheap, simple meals are served at noon, except Sundays when it is closed.

Fed Rates, Figures Indicate More Credit Policy Easing

NEW YORK, Jan. 8 (NYT)—The Federal Reserve System appears to have eased its credit policy another notch.

Not only did the money managers approve a cut in the discount rate—the interest charge they impose on loans to their member commercial banks—but also the pace of expansion in money and bank credit has started to accelerate markedly in recent weeks.

EEC Studies Latest U.S. Trade Protest

BRUSSELS, Jan. 8 (AP)—The Common Market's Executive Commission will study "in due course" a U.S. protest to Britain and the six EEC countries about prospects of extending the Common Market system of preferential trading, an EEC official said today.

A spokesman for the U.S. mission to the Common Market said it had not made a formal protest but only "expressed concern." Such "expressions" are made about once a month on one subject or another, he said.

BASEL, Jan. 8 (Reuters)—Central bankers held their first regular meeting of the year here this weekend.

The exchange disclosed that it would increase its special trust fund for customer assistance to $75 million from $55 million. Since the spring of 1968, the Big Board said, it has intervened in the affairs of nearly 200 brokerage houses, or more than half of all the member firms doing business with the public.

Nixon on the Economy: An Analysis

By Hobart Rowen

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8 (WP)—Overall, the President's Monday-night television comments on the economy were disappointing and worrisome. But first, one should give him credit: Once again, he stated his intention to rely on the "full employment budget" concept, which means, if taken at face value, that he will propose a $10 to $12 billion deficit (at least) in the upcoming fiscal year and is a posture that takes political courage for a Republican.

Cost of Crisis To Big Board: $68.7 Million

By Terry Roberts

NEW YORK, Jan. 8 (NYT)—The New York Stock Exchange calculated yesterday that the total cost of liquidating 14 of its member firms and providing financial assistance to one other during the Wall Street crisis would be $68.7 million.

Olsen Withdraws Bid

Fred Olsen Co. of Norway announced it is withdrawing its bid to take over the ailing Harland & Wolff shipyards in Northern Ireland.

The exchange said the liquidations of four houses had been completed, five others have been substantially completed and two more liquidations are under way or authorized.

THE PLEASURES OF ARCHAEOLOGY

A Visa to Yesterday... By Karl E. Meyer. Athenaeum. 304 pp. Illustrated. $12.50. Reviewed by Glyn Daniel.

THE craft of haste vulgarization is a difficult but very necessary one. It is more necessary in archaeology than in many other humanistic disciplines because the results of archaeology extend so far back beyond the five thousand years of recorded history, and there are everywhere, in prehistory and protohistory, so many uncertainties, so many unresolved problems that the professional archaeologist often shrinks giving a clear answer.

The mind of the general reader wants answers and certainties, and if he is not told clearly the nature of problems and the possibilities of answers to them, he may easily slip away to the simplistic comforts of unreason provided by the wide unaided fringe of archaeology.

We, as professional archaeologists, need those writers and broadcasters who can make our subject intelligible to a large public in an interesting and authoritative way. I still bear the scars of an interview with a very intelligent woman who thanked me for my brilliant program the night before on Boston.

So a very warm welcome to all who can spread the fascinating story of man's past—particularly his very early past—by writing, lecturing, broadcasting, or in any other way.

We have already had a foretaste of Karl Meyer's skill and knowledge of archaeology in his article "Dig," which appeared a few years ago—surprisingly to me—in Time. I liked the article and I liked its subtitle: "The bewildering, perilous, frustrating, addictive, flattering, ennobling and somewhat atrocious pleasures of archaeology."

Obviously there are bound to be mistakes of fact and interpretation. The Paris Exposition was in 1878, not in 1875; and de Sautoula (not Santoula), who was inspired to explore his country by prehistoric implements he saw displayed there, discovered Cro-Magnon paintings of bison in the Altamir cave in the year 1878. Prince Charles did not visit the great painted cave at Lascaux (discovered in 1908) when he visited the Pyrenees. John Coles and myself in Lascaux has been closed to the public since 1933, when the paintings began to deteriorate, and although General de Gaulle specially ordered that it should be opened for our party, the Prince of Wales preferred to be treated as an ordinary member of the public. This is the record, which Karl Meyer, as a very good journalist, has appropriated and set right in the second edition.

Likewise many professional archaeologists, he cannot bring himself to believe that Ernest Lerot-Goubran, Grasset and many another pseudo have been fooled by Rougier. The Cro-Magnon-style paintings are, in my view, skillful fakes. Will he look carefully at the two photographs of the frieze of rhinoceros which published in my "The Rungy Archaeologist in France?"

Clearly the fakes had been altered in the five years before the cave's "discovery" by Nougier and Robert. Why are they whom?

Our writers of highly popular archaeology are—justifiably afraid, and ill-equipped, to do with the fakes, frauds and forgeries which beset archaeology. So there is nothing to be done about the Lascaux man and the Cardiff giant; there is mention of the Minnesota Skua (a Viking fake) and Dorak (a highly suspicious Turkish pal board).

Karl Meyer's next book—I hope for many from his hand—will distinguish between the past and the present, and the melancholy of archaeology. His writing gives us faith in the study of the past: "I believe that archaeology ennobles reason, both in the record of mortal ingenuity that it discloses, and in the manner it makes the dead walk again. This is one of the pleasures of archaeology, and from time to time, in the disorderly epoch, it is a comfort to me..."

Meyer has done a great service to the public in giving us a stimulating and readable book; he has also given the professionals a stimulus to their work. This double achievement, what constitutes the merit of this remarkable book.

Glyn Daniel is a university lecturer in archaeology and fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. He wrote the review for Book World, Supplement of The Washington Post.

The 'Liberated' Women of the U.S.S.R.

By Harry Trimborn

MOSCOW.—In the Soviet Union there is a neat division of labor between men and women:

The women do the work and the men tell them how to do it. Like sweeping the streets, bricklaying, loading cargo ships, collecting garbage, building dams, digging ditches and mining coal.

In comparison with the status of Soviet women, both at home and abroad, the women's liberation movement in the United States seems commercialized and frivolous activity for women with too much time on their hands.

The Soviet woman would hardly consider it a triumph for her sex if she won admission to a construction labor union.

Article 123 of the Soviet Constitution states: "Women in the U.S.S.R. are accorded equal rights with men..."

In short, the government maintains that the Soviet woman is a free spirit who can enter any occupation or engage in any cultural or personal activity that isn't either against the law or beyond her competence.

There have been significant breakthroughs in the emancipation of Soviet women under Soviet rule. A series of social laws has made life easier for both the married and single woman...

Cosmonaut Valentina Nikolayevna Tereshkova is the world's first and only woman to undertake a space flight. An Aeroflot airliner is manned by an all-woman crew...

They are still chained to the chores, which, as Lenin said in 1918, "crush, whittle, and degrade her."

Lenin's words are echoed half a century later in the Soviet Union's own statistics embedded in reports and articles and in the comments of concerned Soviet sociologists, psychologists and educators.

The Soviet woman at work.

one of every two workers in the industrial labor force is a woman, there are six or seven men for every woman foreman or shop chief in industry.

It is no different in the professions. Women make up 85 percent of all medical personnel, yet only 50 percent of them ever become chief physicians or executives of medical institutions.

Besides being at the lower end of the pay scale in each occupation, women also predominate in the lowest-paid activities—medicine, teaching and such industries as the textile industry.

The Soviet woman must also perform the most usual feminine tasks—like having babies, cooking, cleaning, house washing, ironing and buying the groceries.

Such chores might not seem formidable to an American housewife who can cater to her family's comfort and well-being at the touch of an appliance button.

Although she might have been on her feet for up to eight hours a day operating a lathe, the Soviet woman must spend more time waiting in line to buy the family groceries.

The old family ties, which made a woman literally dependent upon her husband for her existence, have been loosened.

Despite all her difficulties at home and on the job, the Soviet woman does not worry about one facet of the battle of the sexes that seems to bother some American women—the fear that she might be considered merely a sex toy.

In fact, the Soviet woman would probably welcome a little personal sex exploitation. As a 23-year-old Moscow woman put it when asked for her concept of an ideal man: "I would want a rich, generous man who would smother me with presents and tenderness."
